Program Information

TCALMC Membership Workshop

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 2014

Minnesota's workforce is aging and we are rapidly approaching a crisis in the workplace, triggered by the convergence of two demographic trends: the growing number of aging Baby Boomers in the population and the much smaller number of younger people who follow behind them. These changes will soon play out in our workforces. The proportion of older workers is expected to increase significantly on an annual basis whereas the proportion of younger workers is shrinking. What impact will this demographic trend have on your workplace and are you prepared to keep up with the need for a well-educated workforce? What are you doing to prepare for your future workforce needs? Has your labor-management committee been discussing and planning for these challenges?

JOIN US on February 5 to hear Susan Brower, Minnesota State Demographer, share with us more specifics on the aging of Minnesota's workforce and what we need to know to prepare for our future workforce needs.
